

As an amateur radio operator I am concerned that sending broadband signals over power lines will adversely affect amateur radio operators. Is it those operators, or the receiving stations, that may be needed to transmit emergency communications or "welfare" traffic. Please consider the usefulness of amateur radio operators, and their need to communicate, when addressing this issue.

Respectfully submitted.
Marc Flanagan (KC8SIE)